

HARVARD COMMUNITY

connections

Faust shares research techniques with Crimson Summer Academy students

Budding young scholars met with one of the University's top scholars to learn about the finer points of academic research, the field of history, and what it's like to be the president of Harvard.

As part of the Crimson Summer Academy (CSA) speaker series, Harvard President Drew Faust addressed a group of high school students at Boylston Hall's Fong Auditorium on July 21.

To read more go to: <http://news.harvard.edu/gazette/section/campus-n-community>

Let a student show you Harvard . . . on a free walking tour

Free student-led historical walking tours of the Harvard campus will help you find fascinating exhibitions and programs, and show you a rich sampling of American history and architecture from the Colonial period to the present.

Call the Harvard Events & Information Center about the tour schedule: 617-495-1573

Fall 2009

On July 29, 2009 the 34th Annual Harvard Yard Picnic for senior citizens took place in Tercentenary Theatre. The Cambridge Senior Chorus from the Cambridge Senior Center, led by Arvilla Sarazen, sang songs like "Sweet Caroline" to the crowd of several hundred.

Summer Teen Employment Program

Through Harvard STEP (Summer Teen Employment Program), a community outreach program managed by Harvard's Office of Human Resources in cooperation with the Office of Government, Community and Public Affairs, and several Harvard schools and departments, approximately 71 local teens were employed by Harvard during their summer break. Harvard University worked with public schools, nonprofit agencies and city departments in Cambridge and Boston to offer summer jobs to high school students as camp counselors, medical research assistants and office staff.

Students and teachers team up at Cambridge Harvard Summer Academy

As students and teachers across metropolitan Boston prepare to head back to school, Derrick Howard, a rising senior at Cambridge Rindge & Latin High School, is among 300 Cambridge students finishing up six-week courses in math, literature, history, biology, physics, or chemistry at the Cambridge Harvard Summer Academy (CHSA).

"I feel like it's a good learning environment because there are more teachers to give you extra help," said Howard, who is spending the summer making up a chemistry class that he had failed during the regular school year. "They make connections to things you understand and that makes it a great place to be."

Now in its ninth year, CHSA is a joint partnership between Harvard University and the city of Cambridge. It is open to any student who resides in the city of Cambridge, from rising eighth-graders to high school seniors, and welcomes both private and public school students. The program is free of charge and offers students the opportunity to gain credit for missed or failed courses or to accelerate their learning by taking courses for enrichment.

The school employs a model in which students receive instruction from teams of teachers. These teams are made up of a mentor, who is an experienced teacher, and a group of two to four interns who are graduate students from the Harvard Graduate School of Education's (HGSE) Teacher Education Program (TEP).

To read more go to: <http://news.harvard.edu/gazette/section/campus-n-community>

Visit us on the web at www.community.harvard.edu

Or email us at community@harvard.edu

Museum of Natural History

Thursday, November 5, 6:00 pm
Natural History Museums in the Environmental Century
Lecture by Michael Novacek

In the 21st century the planet faces radical transformation, which includes mass extinction, rapid change in climate, and large-scale loss of natural habitat. Paleontologist, Senior Vice-President and Provost of Science at the American Museum of Natural History Michael Novacek will discuss how natural history museums like Harvard's MCZ offer unique opportunities for scientific discovery, education, and inspiration, and provide a management plan that draws on the past, reveals the present, and maps our future. Harvard Museum of Natural History, 26 Oxford Street, Cambridge Free and open to the public www.hmn.harvard.edu. 617-495-3045

The Harvard Museums

Currently, the Sackler Museum houses Re-View, a comprehensive selection of works from the Harvard Art Museum's three constituent museums, The Fogg Museum, Busch-Reisinger Museum, and Arthur M. Sackler Museum.

The Peabody Museum...

this is to try to explain the current state of the museums, what is open/where, etc...

Chairs, tables, performances coming to the Yard Community can come together to meet, talk, relax, or study or the first time in more than a century, members of the Harvard community will be able to come together in Harvard Yard to meet, talk, relax, or study with the benefit of chairs and tables.

As part of the effort to enhance the ways in which members of the Harvard community experience the campus, the University will install tables and chairs within Harvard Yard and the Radcliffe Quad and will host open-air performances in select areas across the campus.

*blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah
blah blah blah blah*

To read more go to: <http://news.harvard.edu/gazette/section/campus-n-community>

NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATION
U.S. POSTAGE PAID
BOSTON, MA
PERMIT NO. 1636

Office of Government, Community
& Public Affairs
Harvard University
77 Brattle Street
Cambridge, MA 02138

RESIDENT
1234 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE
CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
02138

Cambridge Family Football Day
Harvard vs. Lafayette
Saturday, October 17, 12 PM
Harvard Stadium
65 North Harvard, Street, Allston
Tickets complimentary for Cambridge residents. Call the Office of Government, Community & Public Affairs at (617) 495-4955 to reserve yours!

Allston/Brighton Family Football Day
Harvard vs. Princeton
Saturday, October 24, 12 PM
Harvard Stadium
65 North Harvard, Street, Allston
Tickets complimentary for A/B residents. Call the Office of Government, Community & Public Affairs at (617) 495-4955 to reserve yours!

